TWO TWIN BROTHERS.

Their Extraordinary Resemblance To Each Other.

The Boston Herald tells many stories of the confusion caused by the resemblance to each other of the twin brothers, Darius and Cyrus Cobb, sons of the Rev. Sylvanus Cobb. They are now 59 years old, Cyrus being a sculptor and Darius a painter, though Cyrus was at one time a lawyer and afterward a painter, his best known work being a picture of "Warren in the Old South." He designed the soldier's monument at Cambridge, and is engaged on a heroic bust of Bishop Doane. Darius Cobb's best-known pictures are "Old Army Friends" and "Washington at Dorchester Heights," the latter having been executed at Longfellow's request and being now in the Corcoran gallery. Not only was their mother unable to distinguish them apart in their childhood, but they have not always been able to distinguish themselves. When they were errand boys in the store now kept by Jordan, Marsh, and Co., Darius once took a jangle of himself in a glass for his brother's sister in recognition, and was about to speak when he discovered the truth. They went to the war, and the daughter of Darius kept what she supposed was her father's picture on her dressing-case for two years. After their return Darius one day wanted his brother's picture, which Cyrus had sent home from the front. A long search revealed in the bottom of a trunk not the picture of Cyrus, but that of himself, the one on the dressing-case proving to be the picture of Cyrus, though Darius as well as his daughter had supposed it to be his own. Their friend William Hunt, the artist, styled them "Serious" and "Delirious." Not long since a gentleman took each for the other on the same day, and, curiously enough, when he apologized each made the same reply, saying that he felt complimented at being taken for his brother. They married sisters.

Fond of the Crown.

EDITOR BULLETIN:

The annexation papers here have often tried to school the public into the belief that the American Government abhors anything approaching the crowned head. But according to the following from the Cincinnati South-West, Americans are quite fond of the crown:

"The new souvenir silver quarter dollars which are now being coined at the Philadelphia mint are said to be much more artistic and attractive than the Columbian half dollar. The one side represents the head of Queen Isabella of Spain wearing the crown of Castile, while on the reverse side is the figure of a woman kneeling by the side of a distaff. This is probably the first time a crown has appeared on an American coin. The souvenirs have been coined for the women's department of the World's Fair and the demand for them is greater than for that of the half dollar pieces. A dollar apiece has already been bid for several hundred thousand of the souvenir halves are still unsold and are now a drug in the market."

Next will most probably be the head of Queen Liliuokalani on American coin as a souvenir of restoration. And then the public will have the satisfaction of seeing Mr. Thurston after his defeat working tooth and nail for the crown, in order to try and worm himself back into the good graces of the Queen, which is a true characteristic of the man. I have no doubt that a large number of our mongrel Americans would give any amount for those Liliuokalani quarters; S. E. Bishop, the Star man, and others will undoubtedly have their ears pierced and wear them as earrings. They will be very becoming and quite attractive.
